A STORY of alleged kiduapping of an usual character was told to Mr Mitchell-Innes at the Police Court this morning. The man who related the story gives himself as a merchant in Canton, and his from Canton yesterday in the river steamer Hankow, he saw a woman in the women's compartment who seemed to be in state of stupefaction; and almost simultaneously he heard three men were in the men's compartment quarrelling with the passengers who were round about. One of these men he heard say; 'They are man and wife; asked the man who was referred to as husband who the woman was and he replied: Bhe is my wife. She has been unfaithful, and I am taking her to Hongkong to sell her. The woman was on one side of the bars, and the three men were o the other side. He then found out that the quarrel was caused by the people wanting to give the woman some sugar as an anti-stupelier, and the men refusing to allow them to give her some. He thereupon gave some sugar to a woman who was near the stupified woman to give to her. On receiving it, the woman recovered a little. She then I don't want to go to Hongkong. three men found me on board. The who told the people to mind their business then told the merchant that he lators shall be Americans. The expectahad better mind his business. expected here on or about the Stir might get into trouble himself. The merchant wisely took himself off at this and reported to the purser, who had the men enel the cook with a sword when the latter called out for help. And there was the testimony of the lukong that he chased the man over the roofs of the houses and arrested him in the Yat On Club It is true that when the man was searched in the Club no sword was to be found, and there were suggestions made that he had WE understand that a civil suit in con- been in the row in the street and entered nection with an alleged infringement of a from the street; but he might very maily foreign trade mark by Chinese, instituted throw away the sword, and the fact that by Messra Arnhold, Karberg & Co., will be suddenly appeared before Chan Chak be heard in the Supreme Court on Monday Pob, one of the witnesses, who were called for the defence, on the versudah would seem to support the lukong's statement that he entered from the roof rather than the door. On the evidence, therefore, it seems to us that the prisoner was guilty of the orime with which he was obarged; and that the paltry fine of $15 was utterly inadequate for the punishment of the offence As to the suggestions which were thrown out against the lukong by the witnesses for the the O. It may be true that the of violence and the borrowing of money, as much reliance; we think, may be placed on the statements of the lukong as, on those of Chan Chak Poh. A man who is willing to shield a rowdy who disturbs the peace and good order of the town, as the compradore expressed himself ready to do, cannot surely be possessed of hyper-sensitive notions of his duty towards right and wrong.

> SAYS the Pall Mall Gazette of the 27th May :- At the County Grand Lodge of Ar. volunteers have already been enrolled in that county alone, all of whom are pledged men are drilled for civil war. It is idle to poul-pool this movement. There is more body in it than many people imagine. Of this we may shortly publish some information, which, may hap, may startle the easy going public not a little. For the present however, we content numelyes with noting the statement from Armagh, and remarking with emphasis that that county by no means stands alone.

RELIEF is coming to the unfortunate people who throughout the summer months are compelled at entertainments of the garden party order to look on at endless games of lawn tennis and to appland vigorously though they don't care a bit about it. new discase has come to light in connection with the game, though not to the players (wo should be quite content with tennis elbow), and just apprehension of a seizure should be quite sufficient to excuse any spectator from seeing more of the game than he or alle wants to. The form taken by the malady is a perpetual cacillation of the head, and it has been observed to arise head follow its course: this movement first n one direction and then in the other becomes, at the end of a reason's onlooking spontaneous, and the victim is condemned ceaselessly waggle his head. As yet there have been no cases on the English aide the Atlantic.—Pau Mall Gazette,

THE Swatow correspondent of the Amou Gazette, writing on the 28th ultimo, gives an account of a somewhat movel entertainment which was given recently in that port. He says :-- I send you betewith a programme which was fulfilled by Pasha Nostaw, on Saturday evening last, to the great delight of the fair audience, who mustered strong on this occasion. In front of the building there will be the large fort alluded to, which must be filled with soldiers in the case of an emergency, while not far distant on the other side there will be another fort doubtless also filled with soldiers. There a nothing at all unlikely that in the time of war an epidemic of cholera should break out. The question thus arises, would any officer place men in forts in the close vicnity of which was a lazaretto crowded with

The building, as stated, runs North and South or about perpendicular to the sea shore below it. It is built of blue Canton brick, with coment walls and concrete floors. At the Northern end is a small building containing the coolig house, kitchen, pantry cupboard. &c., the coolie house and ki chen being but small rooms some 10 feet long by 12 feet broad. Adjoining this room is the largest aport ment in the place—the Chinese ward. It is 54 feet long by 20 feet wide and has six windows and one door on each side, the doors being upposite each other and opening on the front and back verandah rethrust upon it, and it is hoped that they spectively. HOUSE DRAINAGE.

The Hongkong substitute for the clear and precise regulations governing the construction of house drains in American and English cities reads thus:-

IX. The Surveyor General shall in Case any House, whether now arising or hereafter to be constructed, shall not be provided or shall be imperfectly provided with any of the Works in the last immediately preceding Section specified, or with one or more proper Drain or Drains to the said House, of at least Six Inches in diameter, give written Notice of every such Deficiency to the Owner or Occupier of the said House, thereby requiring him to provide for and make good the said Deficiency forthwith or within some specified and reasonable Term to the Satisfaction of the Surveyor General: and in Case the said Owner or Occupier shall not obey or comply with the said Requirement, the said Surveyor General shall cause the said Works to be executed, and may recover the Charges and Expenses thereof together with his Costs of Procedure by Summary Application to a Stipendiary Magistrate, or any two Justices, who shall, in Case of Default in Payment thereof, leve the Amount so recovered by Warrant of Distress and Sale upon the Goods and Chattels of such Owner or Occupi r. without Prejudice to the Right of their Party to recover over, retain, or deduct against the other the | did, in the case of the British Government, Amount so paid or recovered.

The gist of the Hongkong law lies in the words to the satisfaction of the Surveyor General. These words certainly give the Surveyor General plenary powers to deal with every house drain in the Colony in any manuer he may deem fit. This being the case, are the present house drains to the matisfaction of the Surveyor General? Both the Local Government and the C lonial Office admit that the drainage of the city is very far from satisfactory. In the comewhat sophistical reply which was given to the Chamber of Commerce to its communication, requesting that our local quarroom 12 feet long by 20 feet wide, which | antine law should be modified so as to be in accordance with the Imperial law on the subject, one of the principal reasons advanced for refusing the Chamber's request was the insinitary condition of the city: and it is well known that this insanitary condition is. for the most part, owing to defective house drainage. It is therefore quite evident that the house drainage of the city is not to the satisfaction of the Surveyor General, otherwise he must be satisfied with what is officially de-Mr Chadwick, in his able report on the

So far as can be ascertained, nothing whatever has been done to carry out this recommendation. On the contrary, so little attention has been paid could scarcely conceive any improvement to what a special expert states is emergently required, that a very large number of new drains have been since then constructed in the same disgracefully defective manner as formerly, while through lapse of time the old drains and their surroundings have before, in the position of having paid heavily must either consider absolutely worthless or if otherwise they are guilty of a very From the outside the building has a very grave dereliction of duty Harsher terms reasons for adhering to an antiquated system of Quarantine. HONGKONG.

The following paragraphs form the concluding portion of an article on Hongkong which appears in a work ontitled Her Majesty's Colonies, just published, which comprises a series of original papers issued under the authority of the Royal Commission in connection with the Colonial and Indian Exhibition. Among other subjects touched on in the subjoined extracts is that of increased communication between the Govquestions affecting the welfare of the community, more especially of the antive portion, and strong arguments are used in favour of adopting some such measure as we advo-

There can be little question as to the popularity of British rule with the Chinese. The promises held out to them in the early proclamations inviting them to the island have been conscientiously kept, and in the treatment of them throughout there has been a sympathetic consideration for their susceptibilities which has n t passed unappreciated by the mass of them. The consequence has been that after the first few years of the settlement-the Chinese linve flocked to the place, and have made it their temporary home. At first their liking for British rule was an indefinite sentiment of relief at the unwonted freedom to which they were introduced, and it took them some time to realize that the sverities of government to which they were accustomed actually not exist.

With the lapse of time this liberty of action and absence of any outward demonstration of power has generated in the Chiwhich, combined with the insuperable c ntempt which at heart nearly every Chinaman fee a for the manners and institutions of foreigners, occasionally leads to dangerous manifestations of defiance to the aws of the Colony; and there is always a risk that with their constantly increasing numbers and their powers of combination they may get out of control and take the law into their own hands. An instance of this occurred so recently as 1844, when, in consequence of a fine having been inflicted on some boat people for refusing to work when legally bound to do so, the entire boating population struck work, all business was suspended for two or three days. the military had to be called out, and for some time the gravest consequences were apprehended. This risk is also especially great at the present time, when the Government is about to energetically take up the question of sanitation: for it touches so nearly their demestic concerns, and sur systematic endeavour to introduce Western ideas of sanitation into the Chinese quarter must so inevitably strike at the very rout of some of their ingrained notions. ble that when large questions of policy involving enstained consistency of treatment or a lengthened time come to the front, as attempt will be made to broaden the basis of representation of this portion of the pothe government. The head of this department it for certain purposes protector of the Chinese, and in the absence of other means it has been the fushion to recognize im as the medium of all communications to and from the Government with the Chinese. So long as the Chinese required protection this system worked well enough but now, when the a tuation is reversed and it is rather the foreign community that requires protection, some other evatem is required. This was practically recognized n 1870, when the semi-political, semi-charitable institution of the Tung Wa Hospi tal, which has already been mentioned, was founded. It had, however, the drawback of being left entirely in the hands of the Chinese, without a representative of the Government on its working Commission and it has in the lapse of time gradually assumed the role of a kind of secret conclave for the management of Chinese affairs apart altogether from the Government. Nor is he Government able to consult its members unreservedly, because its political character, though very easy to have been foreseen, was never a owedly taken into calculation; and it is, in fact, though in many respects a very admirable institution, and having at the head of it the most respectable Chinese in the Colony, not altogether in touch with the Government It works outside of all, spart from the Government. and cannot therefore be regarded as an ef fective part of the body politic. A y tfur ther attempt in the direction of bringing the Chinese into closer connection with the Government has been made in the appointment of a Chinese gentleman to an unoffi cials at on the Legislative Council: but even this is not considered a wholly ade quate basis. AN ACCOUNT OF CONFUCIUS. BY BILL NYR

Confucius was the Latinized name of a kind of hinese humorist whose name was really Keing-fu-tee. This name translated nieans Rever nd Master King He was a rest man, and many of his sayings have been embalmed in history and handed down to the present time. His style of humor was of the profound variety, but his style of penmanship was like that of F. Spinner, who did some paragraph work at one time for the treasury department Confucius is said to have been a kind of Chinese Mo es, and people who know both these gentlemen say that they had many strong personal characteristics in common He was born in Low on June 19th 551 B.
